De Odor Works - September 3, 2010

You might think I'm crazy, but I'm going to just come out and say it anyway.

You may never need to buy commercial deodorant again.

Are you still there? Are you laughing hysterically? Bending over, coughing, unable to breath by the impossibility of what I'm saying?

Okay, stop hyperventilating. It isn't so crazy. For years, chefs/cooks have been rubbing their fingers under water on stainless steel to help remove kitchen odors like garlic, onions and fish. So, this isn't such a far fetched concept.

De Odor Works is a deodorant product that promises to eliminate body odor naturally. It's a lightweight stainless steel bar that combined with running water can help you manage unpleasant odors under your arms, on your hands, feet, and in ummmmm. . . in other unmentionable areas.

What I like about it -

1. It completely eliminates the use of aluminum which is in standard commercial deodorant products. This is important because of possible links of aluminum to breast cancer, and Alzheimer's disease.
2. It's reusable, for life. Possible cost savings of uhhh. . . I can't count that high. But a lot of money.
3. It's completely natural and safe. It's made of medical grade stainless steel, the same stainless steel used in pacemakers and replacement joint, and will never cause any adverse effects.
4. Easy to use. Just use it in the shower after you washed with soap and water, and your done!
5. If you forget to put on deodorant as you're rushing to get out of the door in the morning, you're covered!

Okay, now to the nitty gritty. It's what you really want to know. Does it really work?

I think it does. I immediately noticed a difference after just one use. I felt like, after running around after my kids, jumping in and out of the car in this hot Texas heat, I just smelled. . . fresher.

Verdict: While, I wasn't brave enough go out in the hot Texas heat without added backup, but I did notice a considerable difference with it's use and my normal hygiene regiment.
